GENERAL.

No. 124. 17th August 1867.

The following Extract from the Proceedings of the Governor General of India in Council in the Home Department, under date Simla, the 24th July 1867, No. 2,719 A, is published for general information.

"The question raised by the Government of Bom-"bay, viz., the propriety of extending to the Uncove-"nanted Service the rules of the 9th September 1864 "regarding the examination of Military Officers in the "oriental languages, has been referred to the Local "Governments and Administrations for their opinions, "with the following result :—The replies from Bengal, "Madras, the North-Western Provinces, Oudh and "Mysore, are against any such extension. Those from "the Punjab, Central Provinces, and the resident at "Hyderabad, are in favour of the extension, but to "Europeans and Eurasians only. No direct opinion "is given by the Chief Commissioner of British Burmah, "but it is implied that a knowledge of Burmese or "Karen suffices for all the wants of the province. The "Government of Bombay in the first instance, extended "the Military rules to the Uncovenanted Service without "restriction, but now goes further and desires the "application to the Uncovenanted Service, with some "restrictions, of the Covenanted Civil Service rules.

"2. The majority of opinions, therefore, is oppos- "ed to the extension of rules in any degree: the mino- "rity is in favour of extension, with very large limita- "tions, and under certain conditions."

3. It seems to the Governor General in Council that the Military rules, which were not primarily intended to be applicable to any but Military Officers, cannot, considering the duties and composition of the Uncovenanted Service, be made applicable to it without very great alterations and restrictions; and it seems also that, as the rules apply to Military Officers, only as such, and with no reference whatever to the civil departments in which they may be employed, each of which has its own rules, other members of these departments have no just ground to complain of exclusion from the prizes awarded by the rules in question.

4. The Uncovenanted Service is much more restricted in its sphere of service, both as regards duty and locality, than the Military. It is not only desirable but necessary that Government should have, among its Military servants who are liable to serve throughout India and the surrounding countries, many officers colloquially acquainted with the languages in use, and some who have acquired a more intimate knowledge of the most common languages from a study of the parent tongues. But, restricted as the Uncovenanted Service is within certain local limits, the Government wants no more from its different members than such a knowledge of the language or languages of the province in which their service will be passed, as will enable them to perform their duties in that province, and this knowledge is, or ought to be, secured by the examinations which each department of the public service provides according to its necessities.

5. It does not appear to the Governor General in Council, therefore, that any particular advantage would be gained by generally encouraging the members of the Uncovenanted Service to acquire a more extensive or more intimate knowledge of languages than that which serves the purpose above mentioned. Whether the examinations referred to do secure that degree of knowledge which would enable an officer to give his full value to Government, another question which will be referred to present ; but if they do not, the remedy for the evil, if it ex s, is not the forcible application to Civil Officers of les prepared for Military Officers.

6. The Uncovenanted Service is composed of Europeans (including Eura ans) and Natives; and, granting that it would be a visable to encourage the former to acquire a better k wledge of the vernacular of the province in which th serve, than is provided for by the preliminary or p obationary examinations, this vernacular being to the , of necessity, a foreign language, it does not appear o the Governor General in Council that there is any ach reason for giving rewards to natives to whom the anguage of the province in which they serve has been miliar from their infancy as their own vernacular. N tives very seldom serve out of their own native prov ce. Such a case as this, however, would be better pro ded for by local than by any general rules.

7. The same degree of miliarity with the vernacular is not required in all epartments of the public service: in some, an acquainta ce with it is unnecessary; in others, it is an advantage, ut not a necessity; and in others, it is absolutely esse tial.

8. The Governor Gen ral in Council thinks, therefore, that the Military ru s ought not to be extended to the Uncovenanted S vice, and the Bombay Government should be desire to rescind its order for their extension. The reward , however, recommended in the two particular cases su mitted, should be sanctioned, the gentlemen concerned having been misled by the order of the Bombay Gov rnment just mentioned.

9. But though opposed to the extension of the Military rules to the Uncove anted Service, His Excellency in Council considers that encouragement might be advantageously held out to Europeans and Eurasians above certain ranks in certain departments, to acquire a better knowledge of the language of the province in which they serve, than it is found expedient to demand in preliminary or pr bationary examinations; but His Excellency thinks that the interests of Government do not require that such encouragements should only extend to officers employed in the Civil Administration of a rank equivalent t that of Assistant Commissioners in the Non-Regulation Provinces, who are eligible to the highest appoi tments in their departments, and to officers similar situated in the Survey and the Police.

10. The present refusal of the Government of India to extend the Military r es to the Uncovenanted

Service will not of course affect the power which has been sanctioned in this department, with special reference to the Military rules of Local Governments and Administrations in certain provinces, to grant rewards to civil officers to the extent of Rs. 500 for passing in special languages.

No. 125. REVENUE—STAMPS.
